

A high-contrast, black and white photograph of a white hibiscus flower in full bloom. The flower is the central focus, with its large, layered petals and prominent stamens clearly visible. A dynamic splash of white liquid, likely milk, is captured mid-air, splashing over and around the flower, creating a sense of movement and freshness. The background is a deep, solid black, which makes the white elements stand out sharply. To the right of the flower, several unopened buds and dark green leaves are visible on the stem.

AYURVEDIC ACTIVE - FAVORITES

Milk and ghee are invigorating and rejuvenating Rasa Janas. Seabuckthorn flesh and avocado with an ideal fatty acid combination are rich in effective antioxidants, carotenoids and flavonoids. The skin's formation of ceramides with linoleic acid protects the skin from drying out. Guava and Baikal skullcap provide an even complexion.
